There are some things she may not like before that you might have noticed, but due to the fact that you like them, she may start developing an interest in them.

A very good example is maybe she likes keeping her nails long, but because she notices you like keeping your nails short, she may start cutting her nails to the extent her friends may be noticing the new changes in her simply because of you.

She is giving you the green light by asking this question because she does not want to share you with any girl.

And if you want to push further you can go ahead and tell her you to have a girl you once had a crush on, and wait for the shocker of your life with the way she will feel.

She may act a little awkward by saying she girl does not fit you and how you are way too out of her league.

She may not tell you physically that she is single, but the hints she will be dropping will let you know she is.

Also, she may be mentioning how her previous boyfriend cheated and moved on or how single she has been.

She can even tease you with how her dream guy must be by mentioning some features and compliments you personally know you possess and may start mentioning names of girls she feels you both have something going on.

up on how your day is going and may suggest a quick lunch together.

This may look more like she is stalking you everywhere but trust me it is not and she meant no harm.

If you see her lingering about, it is because she wants to know what you are doing and where you are.

So think about these questions;

- Does she end up sitting next to you or almost next to you in a gathering or public transport?
- Do you still find her hanging around even when her friends have moved out of the classroom and want to talk to you?
- Does she show up at a particular time of the day when she knows you will be there? And does she show up with snacks when you are in a lonely place?
