How to Play Truth or Dare Questions

In the game of truth and dare questions, each and every person has a choice of his or her own to express their truth (feelings or thoughts) or to complete a challenge.

The person who chooses Dare has to complete the challenge they have been given.

And if they are unable to complete it, then they have to face a penalty, which will be decided by the other participants.

For instance, if a person fails to complete a challenge, then the group may decide that the person must pose as a hen or cock for the next 2 minutes and cannot stand up.

The person who chooses Truth has to answer the question truthfully.

Also, the group can also decide which player has limited or unlimited attempts for truth or dares.

There is no much fun or entertainment in the game of truth or dare questions.

It's a serious but sometimes funny game.

Truth is, if every time a player picks up a truth and eventually tells a lie, the punishment or penalty can be brutal.

It is recommended that each player has a limit of 5 truth questions.

Come On!

Let's play the game of truth and dare questions.

I've have already stated above that the game of truth or dare questions is suitable for all age groups and they can even enjoy the fun.

If you're a parent, you must supervise your youngsters for this game.

But it is not always a requirement as these questions can be easily understood.

So let's get started...
